SecurityFirst

If you have computers in your business, who doesn't these days, then you need to put Security First on every day of the year. Cyber-attack's are on the increase.

Information & technology security standards, like ISO27001, say you need a Security Manager to take care of your systems and data.

You probably haven't got one of those, sitting around, waiting to protect you from cyber-attack or information loss.

Recruiting someone is costly and you probably don't need someone full time.

Training an existing team member means diverting them from their day job and the one thing you can't teach is security experience; which is also something you can't live without. That is where we come in.

We deploy a team of people that keep you on track with their security expertise and make sure protection is constantly improving.

Security First is delivered by the OXYG3N Information Protection Team.

You can hire OXYG3N's Information Protection Team to work with you. Experts in their chosen fields of security, they will bring you what you need to know, when you need to know it; keeping you on track to grow your business.

Hiring them implement our Security First culture will improve your profits, as well as increase the resilience of your current turnover.

Protecting information is critical to your business

SecurityFirst

Lead by Joe Elding, OXYG3N's Technical Director, the team can deliver the following:

- Up to date security processes and documentation.
- Attendance at security meetings.
- Help you achieve security standards like Cyber Essentials and ISO 27001.
- Regularly brief your business leaders on information security
- Send communications to your entire workforce to develop and grow a 'Security First' culture.
- Create and manage a technology risk register.
- Write your strategy for information security; then you can include this in your business plan, investment plans and generally wow bigger customers with our joint 'Security First' approach.
- Security advice, as required, via a dedicated helpline and email.
